

Devoted Solely To The Interests Of Magic And Magicians: Old Magic Magazines Hmm

Magic magazines have been around for centuries, providing magicians with a forum to share their ideas, tricks, and secrets. The first known magic magazine, The Magical Magazine, was published in London in 1790. Since then, hundreds of magic magazines have been published, each with its own unique focus and audience.

One of the most popular magic magazines today is Genii. Genii was founded in 1936 by William Larsen and has been published continuously ever since. Genii is a general-interest magic magazine that covers a wide range of topics, including card tricks, coin tricks, mentalism, and stage magic. Genii also features articles on the history of magic, interviews with famous magicians, and reviews of new magic products.

Another popular magic magazine is The Magic Magazine. The Magic Magazine was founded in 1905 and is published by the Society of American Magicians. The Magic Magazine is a membership magazine that is only available to members of the Society of American Magicians. The Magic Magazine features articles on all aspects of magic, including card tricks, coin tricks, mentalism, and stage magic. The Magic Magazine also features articles on the history of magic, interviews with famous magicians, and reviews of new magic products.

In addition to Genii and The Magic Magazine, there are many other popular magic magazines available today. These magazines include:

- Abracadabra
- The Linking Ring
- M-U-M
- The Phoenix
- The Sphinx

Magic magazines are a valuable resource for magicians of all levels. They provide magicians with a way to learn new tricks, stay up-to-date on the latest trends in magic, and connect with other magicians. If you are a magician, I encourage you to subscribe to one or more magic magazines.

The History of Magic Magazines

The history of magic magazines can be traced back to the early days of printing. In the 16th century, a number of books on magic were published, including The Discoverie of Witchcraft by Reginald Scot and The Examination of Witches by George Gifford. These books contained a variety of magic tricks and spells, and they were widely read by both magicians and laypeople.

The first known magic magazine was The Magical Magazine, which was published in London in 1790. The Magical Magazine was edited by a man named P.H. Abbott, and it featured a variety of magic tricks, articles on the history of magic, and reviews of new magic products. The Magical Magazine was a popular success, and it helped to spark a growing interest in magic.

In the 19th century, a number of other magic magazines were published, including The Conjuror's Monthly Magazine, The Sphinx, and The Magic Wand. These magazines featured a wide range of magic tricks, articles on the history of magic, and interviews with famous magicians. They also helped to promote the development of new magic techniques and illusions.

In the 20th century, the popularity of magic magazines continued to grow. A number of new magic magazines were published, including Genii, The Magic Magazine, and Abracadabra. These magazines featured a wide range of magic tricks, articles on the history of magic, and interviews with famous magicians. They also helped to promote the development of new magic techniques and illusions.

Today, magic magazines are still a popular source of information and entertainment for magicians of all levels. They provide magicians with a way to learn new tricks, stay up-to-date on the latest trends in magic, and connect with other magicians.
