1. Apply for Financial Aid

The first step to paying for college without loans or scholarships is to apply for financial aid. The Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) is the most common way to apply for financial aid. The FAFSA will determine your eligibility for federal and state grants, as well as federal student loans.

If you are eligible for financial aid, you will receive a financial aid award letter. This letter will outline the types and amounts of financial aid you are eligible for. If you have any questions about your financial aid award, you should contact your school's financial aid office.

2. Work a Part-Time Job

Another way to help pay for college is to work a part-time job. This can be a great way to earn some extra money to help cover your college costs. You can find part-time jobs both on and off campus.

If you are working on campus, you may be able to find a job that is related to your field of study. This can be a great way to gain valuable experience while you are earning money to pay for college.

3. Join the Military

If you are interested in serving your country, you can join the military to help pay for college. The military offers a number of programs that can help you pay for college, including the GI Bill and the ROTC program.

If you are eligible for the GI Bill, you will receive a monthly stipend while you are in school. You can use this stipend to help cover the cost of tuition, fees, and living expenses.

The ROTC program is a college-based program that offers scholarships to students who are interested in joining the military after graduation. If you are selected for an ROTC scholarship, you will receive a full scholarship to cover the cost of tuition, fees, and living expenses.

4. Attend a Community College

Community colleges are a great option for students who want to save money on their college education. Community colleges offer the same courses as four-year colleges, but at a lower cost.

Once you have completed your associate's degree at a community college, you can transfer to a four-year college to complete your bachelor's degree. This can be a great way to save money on your college education and get a head start on your career.

5. Consider a Trade School

Trade schools are another great option for students who want to save money on their college education. Trade schools offer training in specific trades, such as electrician, plumber, and welder.

Trade schools typically offer shorter programs than four-year colleges, and they can be a great way to get the skills you need to start your career.

Paying for college can be a challenge, but it is possible to do it without taking on debt or relying on scholarships. By following the tips in this article, you can get an outstanding college education without the burden of debt.
