Joan's Early Life

Joan of Arc was born in Domrémy-la-Pucelle, France, on January 6, 1412. Her parents were Jacques d'Arc and Isabelle Romée.

Joan's childhood was marked by the Hundred Years' War, a conflict between England and France that had been going on for over a century. Joan's family was loyal to the French king, Charles VII, but their village was occupied by the English.

In 1429, when Joan was 17 years old, she began to hear voices that she believed were from God. The voices told her to lead the French army to victory against the English.

Joan of Arc Leads the French Army

Joan of Arc traveled to Chinon, France, where she met with Charles VII. She convinced him that she was sent by God to lead the French army to victory.

In 1429, Joan of Arc led the French army to victory at the Battle of Orleans. This victory was a turning point in the Hundred Years' War, and it helped to boost the morale of the French army.

Joan of Arc continued to lead the French army to victory in a number of other battles. She was wounded in battle several times, but she never gave up.

Joan of Arc's Capture and Execution

In 1430, Joan of Arc was captured by the English at the Battle of Compiègne. She was put on trial for heresy and witchcraft. She was found guilty and sentenced to death.

On May 30, 1431, Joan of Arc was burned at the stake in Rouen, France. She was 19 years old.

Joan's Legacy

Joan of Arc remains a national hero in France. She is remembered as a brave and courageous woman who fought for her country. Her story has been told in countless books, movies, and television shows.

Joan of Arc is also an inspiration to people around the world. She is a symbol of hope and courage, and her story reminds us that anything is possible if we believe in ourselves.

The 21st Century's Joan of Arc

In the 21st century, there are many young women who are fighting for justice and equality. These women are the modern-day Joan of Arcs. They are using their voices and their actions to make the world a better place.

Here are a few examples of modern-day Joan of Arcs:

- Malala Yousafzai is a Pakistani activist who fought for the right of girls to education. She was shot in the head by the Taliban in 2012, but she survived and continued her activism. She won the Nobel Peace Prize in 2014.
- Greta Thunberg is a Swedish environmental activist who has been fighting for climate change action. She has led a global movement of young people who are demanding that world leaders take action to protect the planet.
- Naomi Osaka is a Japanese-American tennis player who has used her platform to speak out against racism and social injustice. She has won four Grand Slam titles and is one of the highest-paid female athletes in the world.

These are just a few examples of the many modern-day Joan of Arcs who are fighting for a better world. These women are inspiring us to be brave, to speak up for what we believe in, and to never give up on our dreams.

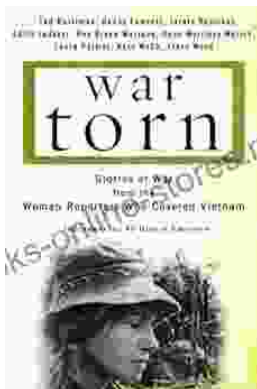

Joan of Arc was a remarkable woman who made a significant impact on the world. Her story continues to inspire people today. She is a symbol of hope and courage, and her legacy will continue to inspire generations to come.
