The author was born in Brazil in 1947. He became involved in politics as a student at the University of São Paulo. In 1968, he joined the National Liberation Action (ALN), a leftist guerrilla group that was fighting against the military dictatorship.

The author returned to Brazil in 1985 after the military dictatorship was overthrown. He has since been active in human rights work and has written several books about his experiences under the dictatorship.

This memoir is a harrowing account of the author's experiences as a political prisoner during the Brazilian military dictatorship. It is a powerful testimony to the resilience of the human spirit in the face of adversity.

This memoir is a valuable addition to the literature on the Brazilian military dictatorship. It is a reminder of the horrors that were committed by the regime and of the courage and resilience of those who fought against it.
