A Life-Altering Diagnosis and a Father's Unwavering Support

The journey of Craig and Conner Spence began in 2003 with the birth of Conner. As a joyful and healthy newborn, little did his parents know that their lives would soon take an unexpected turn. At the tender age of three, Conner was diagnosed with Duchenne muscular dystrophy (DMD), a rare and progressive genetic disorder that primarily affects males. DMD gradually weakens the muscles, leading to loss of mobility and other severe challenges.

Upon receiving the diagnosis, Craig was devastated but not defeated. He embraced the role of both father and advocate, determined to provide Conner with the best possible life. With unwavering love and support, Craig vowed to be there for his son every step of the way.

Embarking on a Journey of Determination and Resilience

He witnessed firsthand the devastating effects of DMD on his son's physical abilities, yet amidst the adversity, his love and determination only grew stronger. Craig dedicated himself to learning everything he could about DMD, researching experimental treatments, and connecting with other families facing similar challenges.

Through Craig's relentless efforts, Conner had access to the latest medical advancements and therapies. He attended physical therapy sessions, participated in clinical trials, and remained engaged in educational and social activities as much as possible. Despite the challenges he faced, Conner's spirit remained unyielding, thanks to the unwavering love and encouragement of his father.

Craig's love for his son extended beyond medical and physical care. He was also Conner's constant companion, offering emotional support, laughter, and a sense of normalcy amidst the difficulties they navigated together.
