The American Revolution (1776-1783)

The American Revolution was the first successful colonial rebellion against a European power. It began in 1776 when the thirteen American colonies declared their independence from Great Britain. The war lasted for eight years, and ended with the British defeat at Yorktown in 1783. The American Revolution was a major turning point in world history, as it demonstrated that it was possible for colonies to break free from their European rulers and establish their own independent governments.

The French Revolution (1789-1799)

The French Revolution was a period of radical social and political upheaval in France. It began in 1789 with the storming of the Bastille, and ended in 1799 with the rise of Napoleon Bonaparte. The French Revolution had a profound impact on France and the rest of Europe. It led to the overthrow of the monarchy, the establishment of a republic, and the spread of revolutionary ideas throughout the continent.

The Industrial Revolution (1760-1840)

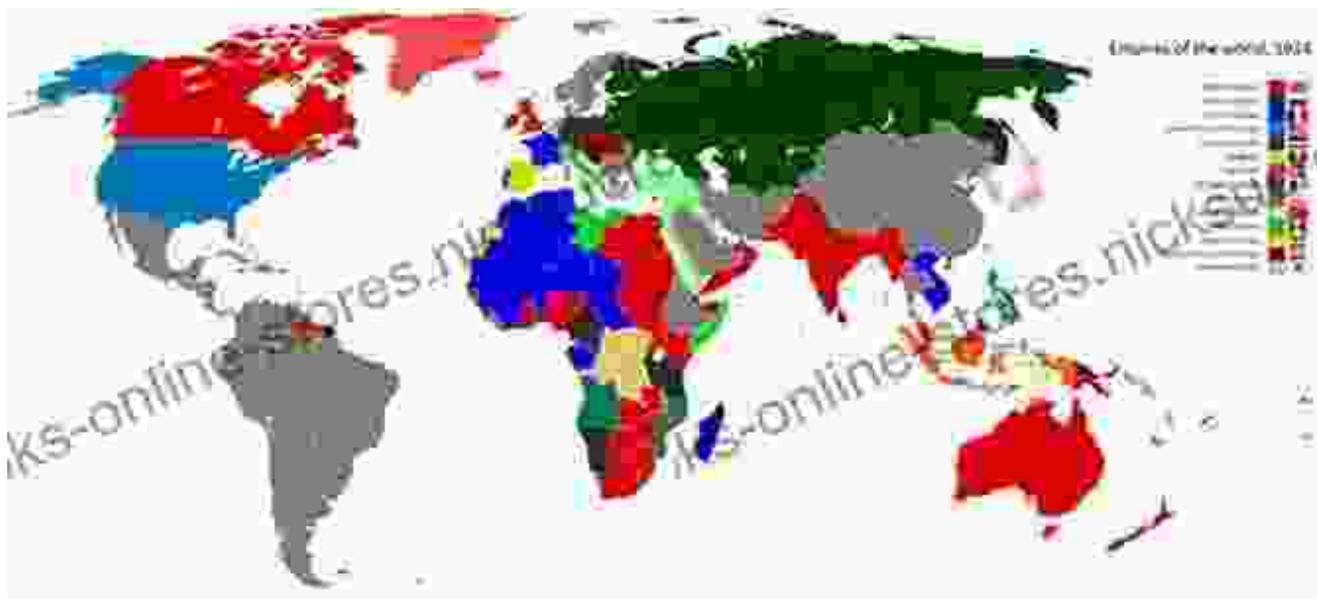

The Industrial Revolution was a period of rapid technological and economic change that began in Great Britain in the mid-18th century. It was characterized by the of new machines and technologies, such as the steam engine, the cotton gin, and the power loom. These new technologies led to a dramatic increase in productivity, and transformed the way goods were produced and consumed.

The Rise of Imperialism (1870-1914)

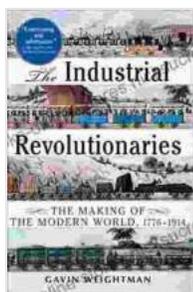

The period from 1870 to 1914 saw a dramatic increase in imperialism, as European powers scrambled to acquire colonies in Africa, Asia, and the Middle East. Imperialism was driven by a number of factors, including economic competition, national pride, and the desire for strategic resources. By the end of the 19th century, most of the world had been divided up between the European powers.
