

The War Against Your Wealth

Inflation is the rate at which prices increase over time. When inflation is high, your money loses value. This means that you need more money to buy the same things that you could buy before. You can protect yourself from inflation by investing in assets that outpace inflation, such as stocks and real estate. You can also try to negotiate a raise at work to keep up with the cost of living.

Taxes are another way that the government takes your money. Taxes can be federal, state, or local. They can be on your income, your property, or your sales. You can reduce your tax burden by taking advantage of deductions and credits. You can also invest in tax-advantaged accounts, such as IRAs and 401(k)s.

Fees are another way that banks and corporations take your money. Banks charge fees for everything from overdrafts to ATM withdrawals.

Corporations charge fees for everything from credit cards to cell phone plans. You can reduce your fees by shopping around for the best deals.

You can also try to negotiate lower fees with your bank or credit card company.
