1966–1979: Foundations of Value Investing

The 1960s and 1970s marked a formative period for Warren Buffett's investment philosophy. Drawing inspiration from Benjamin Graham, the father of value investing, Buffett developed a disciplined approach centered around intrinsic value, margin of safety, and a long-term perspective.

- "Rule No. 1: Never lose money. Rule No. 2: Never forget Rule No. 1."

- "It's far better to buy a wonderful company at a fair price than a fair company at a wonderful price."
- "The stock market is a device for transferring money from the impatient to the patient."

1980–1999: Expanding Beyond Value Investing

Warren Buffett expanding his investment horizons in the 1980s.

In the 1980s and 1990s, Warren Buffett's investment philosophy evolved as he expanded his horizons beyond traditional value investing. He began investing in undervalued growth companies and acquired entire businesses, such as See's Candies and The Washington Post Company.

- "If you can't understand a business, don't invest in it."
- "It's okay to pay a fair price for a great company."
- "Our favorite holding period is forever."

2000–2019: Embracing Technology and Philanthropy

The early 21st century witnessed Warren Buffett's continued success as an investor and his growing influence as a philanthropist. He invested heavily in technology companies, such as IBM and Apple, and pledged to give away the majority of his wealth to charitable causes.

- "Investing in technology is a way of betting on the future."

- "The best way to prepare for the future is to invest in the future."
- "It's not how much money you have, but how you use it."

2020–2024: Navigating Unprecedented Challenges

Warren Buffett facing the challenges of the COVID-19 pandemic and global uncertainty.

The COVID-19 pandemic and ongoing global uncertainty have presented unprecedented challenges for investors and business leaders alike. Warren Buffett has continued to share his wisdom and insights, emphasizing the importance of adaptability, resilience, and long-term thinking.

- "The stock market is always a risky place, but it's also a place where you can make a lot of money if you're patient and disciplined."
- "When the going gets tough, the tough get going."

- "We should always invest with the idea that the market will close for 10 years."
