The South African Border War

The South African Border War was a low-intensity conflict that lasted from 1966 to 1989. The war was fought between the South African Defence Force (SADF) and the South West African People's Organisation (SWAPO), a Namibian nationalist movement. SWAPO was supported by the Soviet Union and Cuba, while the SADF was supported by the United States and other Western powers. The war was fought over the control of Namibia, which was then a South African colony. Namibia eventually gained independence in 1990.

Koevoet

Koevoet was a counter-insurgency unit of the SADF that was formed in 1979. Koevoet was known for its brutal tactics, which included torture, summary executions, and the use of excessive force. Koevoet was also accused of war crimes. Despite its controversial reputation, Koevoet was a highly effective counter-insurgency force. Koevoet played a key role in the SADF's victory in the South African Border War.

Golf's Story

Golf was a young South African conscript who was assigned to Koevoet in 1981. Golf was initially horrified by the violence and brutality that he witnessed.
